RESEARCH IMPACT:

(A) Direct Policy Involvement:

- (i) While working as a consultant to the Minister for Employment, Education and Training in 1987-89 I prepared an options paper on university funding which outlined the advantages of an income contingent loan (ICL) for higher education financing and this led to the institution of the Higher Education Contribution Scheme in 1989. It was the world's first national income contingent charging system for higher education. Other countries have since introduced a variant of HECS, including New Zealand, Chile, South Africa, and Ethiopia, and several countries including the UK and Thailand are introducing ICL in 2006 or shortly afterwards. I have been an advisor on ICL to the governments of most of the above countries, and was particularly involved in the reforms in the UK, Israel and Thailand. With the World Bank and other agencies I have been engaged on this issue with the governments/academics of Papua New Guinea (1996), Malaysia (1998), Ethiopia (2000), Rwanda (2001-02), Nepal (2002), Mexico (2003), Colombia (2003), Thailand (1996-2006), the UK (1997-2006), Israel (2005) and Germany (2005).
- (ii) In 1992 I was engaged by the Federal Government to help redesign AUSTUDY, the Australian student income support program. My report suggested that a new loan option involving the trade-in of some grants for an ICL should be developed, and this led to the AUSTUDY Loans Supplement, introduced in 1993 (discontinued in 2004).
- (iii) Labour market programs and the long term unemployed. In 1991-94 I wrote a series of papers concerning the size and associated problem of the emerging long term unemployment issue, and I am told that this led to both increased targeting and setting up of the committee which developed the Working Nation labour market programs of 1994-96. I was engaged in the process that led to similar reforms in the UK in the 1997-99 period.
- (iv) HECS-HELP and FEE-HELP. In 2003-05 the Parliament held several inquiries into higher education, and was invited to write submissions and appear as Expert Witness. I analysed some of the problems with higher education funding and offered suggestions concerning changes to the design parameters of both HECS-HELP and FEE-HELP. Most of these were adopted in 2005.

- (v) Dr Timothy Higgins and I wrote a paper researching the impact of the Government's proposed changes to HELP interest rates in the 2014/05 budget which has been reported as changing the policy position back to the original regime of HECS, a position we illustrated to be much more equitable.

(B) Mentions in newspapers, 1996-2006:

Over this period it is possible to collect information on the number of times scholars are reported in the Australian press. Excluding newspaper articles authored, my number is 325, which is the highest of all current Academic economists (although Bob Gregory, Economics, RSSS, ANU, who has recently retired, totalled 335). In the Group of Eight (which employs at least 200 economists) there are only four who exceed a count of 200: Chapman, 325; Andrew Leigh, 282 (SPEAR, RSSS, ANU); John Quiggin (University of Queensland, 276; and Peter Dawkins (formerly the Melbourne Institute), 207. If own authored pieces are added back the top four remain the same but the order is changed, the counts being: Quiggin, 479; Chapman, 342; Leigh, 333, and Dawkins, 272. The topics I have been reported on are: HECS; student loans policies; long term unemployment; labour market programs; the economics of crime; income contingent loans for athletes; the forgone earnings from child rearing income contingent loans for white collar crime; the economics of Don Bradman; strike activity; paid maternity leave and drought relief policy.

Since 2006 there has been a very considerable increase in this number and while I don't have the data it is very likely that I am the most cited academic economist in Australia.

(C) Mentions in Hansard, 1990 – 2006 (only period for which data are available)

In this period my research was reported in the Australian Parliament on 92 occasions. This is the highest number for all currently employed Australian academic economists (although Professor Bob Gregory, recently retired from the Economics program, RSSS, ANU, has a count of 103). The next highest number is Professor John Quiggin, University of Queensland, who has 72. The policy and research areas in which my work has been reported include: strikes and the Accord; long term unemployment, Working Nation; HECS; AUSTUDY; the 2003 planned changes to university financing; industrial relations; paid maternity leave; and drought relief policy.

(D) Citations.

I currently have around 4,300 Google Scholar citations and am in the top 8 per cent of REPEC (economics) citations internationally.
